Notes

1. Wireless button search will automatically end after three minutes without connecting to any devices, and the flashing light will turn off. If you press the button during the flashing period, the search will end.
2. Wireless button mode has higher priority than broadcast mode. In broadcast mode, if different devices connect via wireless button to play audio or video, broadcast mode will stop. If no playback occurs for about 4 seconds, it will re-search for other broadcast signal sources.
3. If multiple sofas are connected to the same device via wireless button, audio and video cannot be played simultaneously. The default is for the last connected sofa to play.

Example: If sofas A, B, and C are all in broadcast mode (red light stays on), press and hold the pairing button (red light flashes) to connect to sofa A (purple light stays on). Sofas B and C will sync to play audio or video from sofa A. If the same device connects to sofa B (purple light flashes), sofa B and C will play normally, and sofa A will stop working. If you then connect to sofa C (purple light stays on), sofa C will play normally, while sofas A and B will not work. A restart is needed for playback.
4. When using wireless button to connect the main speaker sofa to a TV, there may be delays and instability. It is recommended to use a wired connection to the main speaker sofa and then use broadcast mode for wireless synchronization to other sofas.
